It's been a little slow at the Null law offices.

Debra works at a bank. Debra makes great copies of the Rotary Today each week for the club. Debra is great with a copy machine. Debra distributes money from the bank. Money is printed on paper...

“I saw you at Pizza Hut woofing down a triple cheese stuffed crust, double anchovy, last night Jessy! I knew it was you!” Stacy greets an embarrassed Jessy. Joel is wondering what sort of health insurance he should sell these two pizza lovers.

Three heads and a head.

“Hey, I have a lot of kids to feed, I’m taking half of this home.” Spencer defends his Rotary haystack.

“Nice try James. This is for my family.” Spencer teases James with his masterpiece.

“I’m not sure what this is, but I think I’ll take a lot of it just in case.” Jason loads up at the lunch line.

After Jason hears what Nate is offering for lunch afterward at the Grande Ronde Retirement Center, he wonders if he made a mistake filling his plate at Rotary.

“And then we went to Portland and saw some weird stuff, but since I was with the Crew’s family we fit in pretty well.” Konnie reports on her week’s activities as Makayla listens.

The man in the checkered shirt is John Garlitz, Mary Calder’s guest wearing black and white stripes. Jeri Mackley in red and black stripes listens to John’s introduction. Joel Myer, in plain blue shirt (who clearly did not get the memo that this was strips and checks day), explains to John why he has received a bill before he has been officially admitted to the club.

Steve Hamilton took Rotary through a whirlwind tour of his life story, kind of like his life—a whirlwind!
