They go together like two peas in a Rotary pod! Glenn and Kelsie pose as they are poised to enter the noon meeting.

There is nothing wrong with the camera or the photographer in this picture. The reason for the blur is because Jessy is a blur. He just doesn't stand still long enough for the camera to catch his image!

“Don’t be frightened, Graham, I’ll still be in noon Rotary. I’m leaving the presidency, not the club!” Sandra consoles Graham when he hears that Sandra is leaving....

Nate and Brayden have discovered their thumbs. One more checkoff in converting the red badge into a blue one. Good job fellows!

Mary gets some advice about putting her badge right side up from Brent. Mary, flipping up her badge was heard to say, "Well, it looks right side up to me!"

Dale negotiates the going rate for 50-50 tickets with Eric. "If one ticket is $1 and I can get 3 for $2, how much can I get for this McDonalds coupon?" John looks on and learns.

Kelsie tells a joke on the lunch line that makes the boys laugh:

Q: What's the difference between a female lawyer and a pitbull?

A: Lipstick!

Spencer and Ryan get a kick out of Kelsie.

“I’m just a bill, I’m only a bill, sitting here on capitol hill. I know I’ll be a law someday, I hope and pray, but today I am still just a bill!” Tucker sings the Schoolhouse rock song to Sandra to explain how legislation passes through congress.

Dave winces when he realizes that he invested more into buying tickets than what the actual prize of winning 50-50 paid! Remember what they say on the lottery tickets, Dave, playing is for entertainment, not for investment purposes. Maybe Dave should think about a better place to put his money—maybe collector plates. We hear the NASCAR series is or right ow, Dave...

Spencer does a little outpatient diagnosis with Dave. Looks like Dave needs a different kind of doctor.

Kelsie gives an overview of her pathway to becoming district attorney and her life in the legal system.
