A Rotary Tree Grows in la Grande

Graham leans in to read the music. Hey wait a minute, Graham doesn't read music!

“Are you tellin’ me that we have to dig the hole on tree planting day?” Michael is wondering what he can say to help.

“I could dig holes, I suspect, but I would have to have the engineering specs to know how to proceed. And, of course I would need training to be sure I knew how to use a shovel.” Dave looks at the Saturday dig from an engineer’s perspective.

“The only hole I am going to fill is my pie hole!” Eric contemplates planting a tree.

Brent shows the club how to bend over as one digs a hole and wave at the camera while doing so. The event will be livestreamed, no doubt!

“Here’s my dollar. I’m payin’ Bob to dig my hole for me.” Bob likes that proposition.

“We have to manage these holes! Three people per hole, two shovels, one rake, one hose.”
Rick organizes the thinking about planting.

“Here’s the song and dance I am planning for the planting,” Michelle shows her moves.

“Dear Lord, save me from this man who fills my life with Rotary pictures. Amen.” Michael silently prays for Eric.
