A Visit to Café Rotary.

One day, Dave and Graham decided to get some lunch and stopped by a café to see what was for lunch.

It seemed like a bunch of people were also headed to this café at the same time. Braden and Brett march in.

Graham remembered it was a Tuesday, and thought there was something special about that day. Jim and Graham puzzled about the activity around them. Everybody seemed to be wearing a name tag.

It was surprising to see folks stand around talking to one another and not sitting down just to eat. It seemed like these people knew and appreciated one another. Rick and Craig have a conversation.

Debra and Braden have a chat.

There was also entertainment at this café. Local clowns, Jessy and Bob yuk it up for attendees.

Graham and Jim notice that the Café Rotary Host, Joel Myer, checks in with patrons and takes their order.

The food is finally served!

Like Jim, Café patrons join the buffet.

Unlike some restaurants, the placemats are always advertisements, sign-up sheets and information about something going on in the community.

Everyone is happily eating, then all of a sudden, a blaring bell is rung and the patrons of the Café all stop and stand up and sing. What kind of restaurant is this? People then start offering information about community activities. Here, Kelly describes the upcoming Clean-up Day.

Everything seems to settle down when Michelle stands up and gives a talk. This is the strangest Café ever!

“What do you think Graham, you want to come back next week?” Graham thought the food was good and they had a good time. They met people they liked and thought that these people were trying to do good in the community. “Yes, indeed. Let’s come back next week!”
