The Usual Suspects

Graham says, "The print is so big I can read it from here. Judge Valentine is guilty!"
Dave gleefully points to the evidence.

The judge is served! Eric is served warrants for overdue club fees. Enforcers Craig and Dave corner the wily prey.

“This badge gives us special powers! We can throw the book at Eric!” Jeff and Robert admire their opportunity to exact justice.

“I think we should have one of those things they had in the middle ages, what do you call it—where they put offenders in with their heads and hands sticking out so people could walk by, laugh, and throw old tomatoes.” Jean suggests that people like Eric who are late with club fees be punished in stocks. Chris is liking this idea.

“In Finland, to punish people, we don’t allow them to butter their cheese. That is the worst thing we can imagine, for sure.” Sonja reports her week in La Grande.

Eric Valentine! Guilty as charged. Multiple counts of being a Rotarian in good standing, for having served the club and community faithfully, and for having been an encouraging and joyful part of the fellowship. Sentence: 20 years of continued service!
